Affidavit Accuses Capt. Fonck Of Incompetency

FLIGHT OFFICIAL RESIGNED HIS JOB OVER FRENCH ACE

Hartney "Insinuates" Disaster Was No Surprise To Him

SENSATION IN BLAZE PROBE

Commander Accused Of Seeking Glory For Self Only

MINEOLA, N. Y., Sept. 24. (AP)—District Attorney Edwards today made public an affidavit by Colonel H. E. Hartney, former general manager of the Argonauts Inc., backers of the disastrous Fonck airplane flight, in which he stated he resigned from the organization because he believed Captain Fonck was incompetent to handle a ship of that size and load.

The affidavit recites that on September 8 Colonel Hartney told A. C. Dickson and John B. Jamieson, that in his opinion the personnel of the flight should be reorganized by the elimination of Captain Fonck as he believed for him to attempt the flight was "to jeopardize human life and property."

Colonel Hartney said his associates refused to consider the plan, declaring to do so "would affect the friendly relations between France and America." He said he then told them if Captain Fonck was retained in command, he would resign as vice president and general manager of the Argonaut Inc., which he said, he did.

Among the reasons cited by Colonel Hartney for believing Fonck could not take the plane to France in safety, were lack of rehearsal flights, poor pilotage and irresponsibility.

"I might also say that in my opinion," the affidavit says, "he was incompetent to handle a ship of this size and load."

"I pointed out that a written understanding regarding Captain Homer Berry had been abrogated by Fonck; that there was no teamwork in the crew and that he seemed to be working to one end only—namely that he would get all the prize money and all the publicity and had this uppermost in his mind, rather than a desire to make the flight a great success."

He said he was at the flying field at the time of the take-off and that the tail never left the ground. He expressed great confidence in Igor Sikorsky, builder of the plane.

FLORIDA AID IS MORE THAN $500

Active Campaign Is Closed, Money Is Still Coming

Albany-Decatur contributors have given more than $550 to the Florida storm sufferers, it was stated today by John D. Wyker who has conducted the campaign for the Red Cross. Mr. Wyker said that $550 has been sent from these cities.

The active campaign has been closed, declared Mr. Wyker, but contributors can still do their bit toward aiding the storm sufferers by making donations to Mr. Wyker.

Albany-Decatur was one of the first cities in the state to undertake the drive and unusual success was found by campaigners who worked in the interest of humanity.

Congressman Comes To See Fair And Visit Friends

Edward B. Almon, congressman of the eighth Alabama district, was a visitor in Albany-Decatur Thursday afternoon, having come here at the invitation of officials of the North Alabama Fair and to visit the hundreds of friends he has in these cities.

Congressman Almon has been summering in Tusculum, his home, since the closing of congressional sessions and apparently is in robust health, despite the fact that he was thought seriously ill when he first came home from legislative duties.

Judge Almon who has been an advocate of disposal of the Shoals in the best interests of the people will again be in the center of the Shoals properties fight when the question again stirs in legislative halls.

NEW CHAMPION IS AWARDED LIEUTENANT'S RANK IN M. C.

Gene Tunney Completely Out-Fights Jack Dempsey To Reach The Peak In The Pugilistic World.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—(AP)—"First Lieutenant," United States Marine Corps Reserve, is the rank that will be bestowed on Gene Tunney, who last night won the title as heavyweight pugilistic champion of the world.

Colonel Cyrus Radford, commandant of the marine corps, in Philadelphia, called Billie Gibson, Tunney's manager, on the telephone today, seeking the new champion.

"I wanted to tell him," said the Colonel, "that he has passed his examination for a commission in the marine corps and may expect to receive his commission in a few days."

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—The scepter of the world's championship kingdom that Jack Dempsey had held since 1919 was wielded today by Gene Tunney, idol of the marines and of New York's Greenwich village.

Through a steady downpour of rain that drenched the greatest fight spectacle of all time, Tunney, who shouldered a buck private's musket in the conflict of the ages, fought his way to the peak of pugilistic heights.

In a match that completely reversed expectations, stunning in its one-sidedness Tunney pounded and flayed the title holder into semi-consciousness. Dempsey was so badly battered that only fighting instinct kept him on his feet to the final bell.

Tunney won all the way. He was the conqueror to all intents and purpose, after beating Dempsey to the ropes in the first round and staggering him with a succession of staggering rights to the head. From then to the finish, the challenger dominated the fight, outfighting, out-boxing and outgenerating the title holder with a masterful exhibition.

Tunney failed to bring his foe down, but he battered the heavily favored champion into almost complete submission with such decisiveness that the official announcement of the decision, crowning a new king, was lost in the uproar that broke loose with the tap of the last gong.

Dempsey was a mere shadow of the fighting machine that has been ranked among the greatest in boxing annals. Against such a cool and calculating opponent as Tunney, it would have taken Dempsey

THE disaster in Miami, and other parts of Florida proves to be more extensive than first reports indicated. Hundreds are killed, gigantic property values swept away.

None the less, Florida will not be discouraged. The rest of the nation, deeply sympathizing, knows that all parts of the country are exposed to the fury of nature's forces.

WE READ with horror of "hundreds killed," and well may. It is wise to remember that one single shell, bursting in war time, may kill more than were killed in this Florida tornado. One heavy shell, dropped from a bombing airplane could wipe

MID-WEST IS HELD IN GRIP OF ICE AS FIRST SNOW FALLS

Farmers Drop Work To Gather Seed Corn Today

TEMPERATURE IS FREEZING

Many States Swept By Chilly Blasts From Mountains

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Sharp drop in temperatures were forecast for mid-west states today as cool breezes swept from the north.

The advent of fall yesterday was marked with rain and snow in Washington, Montana, Wyoming, North Dakota and Canada. Freezing temperatures were reported generally in the northern tier of states.

Livingston, Montana, reported the record low of 18 above zero while the mercury hit the lower twenties throughout the Rocky mountain regions. Two to four inches of snow fell in the Nicola valley of British Columbia.

Spokane yesterday recorded the earliest snow since 1887 with the thermometer registering 31 degrees. Some damage was reported to unharvested grain in the Pacific northwest. Clear skies, with frost and freezing temperatures was the general forecast for this region today.

Although thermometers were slated to register no higher than the upper sixties, or lower seventies today, the prediction called for generally clear skies.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 24.—Near freezing temperatures accompanied by snow which reached a depth of six inches in several places were reported in Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota today. It was the first cold spell of the season.

Crosby, Williston, Sherwood and several other points in North Dakota reported six inches of snow. Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta and parts of Manitoba also had snow storms.

Warmer weather was predicted.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Sept. 24.—Warned of the approach of cold weather Iowa farmers today dropped all other duties to gather first class corn seed. The action was taken following information from the weather bureau that cold bearing down on the state, might make it impossible after today to gather the seed.

Large Crowds In Cities This Week

That there are large crowds in the Twin Cities this week is evidenced by the fact that local hotels have been doing a large volume of business.

J. K. Hughes, popular manager of the Lyons hotel, stated that hotel has been full all week. Arrangements were made, however, for caring for the usual customers of the hotel and none was turned away.

Negro Hanged For Highway Robbery

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Frank Owens, negro, was hanged here today for highway robbery. He was found guilty of attacking two men with an axe with robbery as the motive.

Owens went to his death declaring his innocence and that he had "not had a square deal."

Bureau Doesn't Endorse Any Of Bids For Shoals

FLORENCE, Ala., Sept. 24.—(AP)—The executive board of the American Farm Bureau Federation, meeting here this week, did not endorse any private bid for Muscle Shoals, desiring freedom of commitment in the face of proposed new bids.

At an executive session lasting well into the morning hours the board formulated a plan, the details of which were not published, to secure congressional action in connection with disposition of the property.

One new proposed bid was laid before the board by representatives of New York capitalists. The details of the proposal were not made public.

COTTON PICKERS ARE IN DEMAND

Staple Maturing With Much Rapidity All Over Area

With cotton pickers in demand, fields maturing rapidly, and gins being operated night and day, the movement of cotton to market is in full swing in the Tennessee Valley.

Farmers are bending every effort to get the cotton out of the fields before the rains begin, believing that their grades will be generally higher this season than last.

While much cotton is being sold on the local market, a number of farmers are holding back their best grades of cotton in the belief the price will show a marked advance later in the fall. The low grades are being sold.

So far there has been little congestion in local railway yards. The incoming cotton has been handled smoothly and it was believed there would be no repetition of last year's "traffic jam" here when it became necessary to impose an embargo on incoming shipments until the yards were cleared.

ORDER ISSUED AS HEALTH ACT

Citizens Protest To Governor Martin Against Edict

MOORE HAVEN, Fla., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Some 200 remaining residents of this storm-devastated town, were evacuated today by national guard troops despite their "protests" and their appeal to Governor Martin.

Evacuation was carried out under an order by the militia officers, issued on the advice of Dr. B. L. Adams, state health officer. Notice of the enforced evacuation was posted yesterday and the citizens immediately dispatched an emissary to Governor Martin to have the order set aside. The scene presented early today, as the first of the survivors started to leave, was reminiscent of some of those in France during the world war.

Some waded knee deep and sometimes waist high through the flooded streets, towing rowboats loaded with salvaged household and personal effects. A number of the refugees led cows or pulled hogs along the streets. They were given accommodations on the steamer Priscilla, down the lake, and to railway points where they entrained for Sebring and other places.

The scene of desolation is almost indescribable. The town practically is wiped out. The atmosphere is charged with offensive odors, caused by decomposing animals as well as by decaying vegetable matter, swept into town during the flood, from Lake Oklawaha.

TOWN IS CENTER OF SMALL BOOM

Kimbrough Expects Real Growth After A Long Sleep

KIMBROUGH, Ala., Sept. 24.—(AP)—This town has become the center of a tiny boom which promises to draw attention before it is over.

Having for years been the northern terminus of the Muscle Shoals Birmingham and Pensacola Railroad Kimbrough has marked this in its growth, not more than 10 persons difference having been registered in gain or loss in population during the last decade.

With the purchase of the railroad by the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad business in Kimbrough is expected to take on an added impetus. It is expected that following announcements made by the Frisco Railroad that considerable expenditures will be made here and that many employes and their families will be sent here. Shops and company houses will be built, it is announced, and materials and supplies will be shipped in to fill the demands.

Kimbrough likely will be made a division point on the augmented line of the Frisco. This town is already staked off into lots of average dimensions and property owners are expecting the "boom" to set in as soon as definite announcements are made by the Frisco.

No Abatement In The Hot Weather

NO ABATEMENT While other sections of the nation complained of particularly early snowfalls, Albany-Decatur and Morgan county continued to swelter today under a burning summer sun. Citizens in this section did not even realize that the first day of fall had come and that the weather would soon be tapering off into a lower record for temperatures.

Despite the torrid sun rays the Decatur eleven left today for Tusculum to open the 1926 season. Coach Kirby accompanying them. Albany high went through a hard workout which only the few on the injured list were able to escape. The increased temperature brought only grumbles from the boys at they went through their paces.

INTERESTS MEET AT THE CAPITOL

Four States Enter The Parley In Middle Of October

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 24. (AP)—Representatives of agriculture and other business and industry in the states of Alabama, Mississippi, Florida and Louisiana will meet here October 11-12 in the Hall of Representatives, state capitol.

The conference will be called to bring before business and industry in this territory the outstanding regional agricultural problems and to indicate wherein all interests can work for their solution.

"For several years now agriculture has been discussed well-nigh solely in terms of its national aspects," says William Harper Dean, manager of agricultural service, Chamber of Commerce of the United States. "That is perfectly proper, but in endeavoring to visualize agriculture from so wide an angle, there is danger that we overlook local and regional problems which can be solved by local and regional action.

With this thought in mind, the National Chamber in the last fiscal year held four such conferences, at which were represented agriculture and other industry from a total of twenty-two states. "The discussions were valuable contributions to a fund of knowledge of regional conditions. This year we plan to hold five such conferences embracing 29 states.

The party is free to the public, the Daily bearing the expense.

TODAY

From The Daily of
September 24, 1914.

Master Skeggs Crawford celebrated his birth anniversary Wednesday afternoon with a "movie" party.

Miss May Frazier of Pulaski is the guest of Mrs. P. R. Hutson.

Mrs. D. W. Irwin and children of Hillboro are the guests of her sister, Mrs. T. H. Williams.

Congressman C. C. Harris returned from Washington last night suffering a severe cold.

Misses Julia Neville and Kate Lile of Trinity were among the out-of-town shoppers yesterday.

With tomorrow night the North Alabama Fair comes to a close and this newspaper hopes the week has been successful for the producers. They have tried hard in putting the fair across, have had obstacles and disposed of them, threatening weather over which they had no jurisdiction. All Albany-Decatur will turn out Saturday.

Have you made your contribution to storm sufferer's relief yet?

A vote for a bigger city will not suffice, your influence is necessary also.

The election is over, let's talk and do something else.

Alabama again has something to be thankful for. The storm passed with few deaths and much smaller property damage than Florida.

It isn't more bids the people of the Shoals district want. They desire action on one of those which has been pending all this time.

Perhaps in the next war, America might persuade her opponents to send representatives to congress where they could be talked to death.

May all election differences be forgotten in the next few days and the cities go forward toward new civic goals.

Harry Thaw, in publishing the story of his life, must believe the newspapers have overlooked something.

To those newspapers and citizens who have urged longer school terms in rural sections, news of the improvement of these schools is most encouraging.

What business gain will you show this fall? Figure that up and then figure how best you may triple that gain in the latter part of September and the next month of October.

Detroit republicans, gathered in convention, staged a fist fight. Republicans will do that in their county meetings, but how long has it been since a battle marked a national convention?

For recent "wise cracks," we award the stuffed owl to the Gadsden Evening Times, which remarked: "The hurricane in Florida will also cause a little blow in California."

Albany-Decatur certainly turned out a record vote on Monday. Over 2,000 votes were cast, that looks more like people are taking an interest in what is going on in their cities. Government is provided for the people, they should take occasion to see that the men they desire to rule them are placed in office.

The Daily takes occasion to thank the telephone company for the excellent service given on election night. The telephone company gave excellent service to the Daily and to the hundreds of people in the cities who called the newspaper. We thank the operators for their efficiency and pleasantry.

To the man or woman who really wants an education there is no obstacle too large to overcome. This from among the observations of Reverend James D. Hunter, Central Methodist pastor. The pastor and the writer were discussing the merits of football and arrived at the conclusion that the wonderful sport is ninety-nine per cent hard work. The Methodist leader told the story of the young man who had no funds and finally listening to the appeal of his friends he managed to get a job, not a position, in a college. He learned to play football and after four years of service on the team he was given a valuable memento in token of the esteem of his fellow students. He had started with nothing, but determination, he had ended with personal glory, was an honor to his parents and to his school. That is one of the lessons athletic activity will teach. Let the boy play, he will be better fitted for the bigger fight a few years later.

The Morgan county club boys and the Home Demonstration Girls have added much to the exhibition department of the North Alabama Fair. The successful work of the club boys and girls is due alone to the untiring efforts of Miss Sallye Hamilton, demonstration department, and Joel C. Ford, county farm agent. There is a great deal more in the work of these two interesting people than the mere holding of a position. Both Miss Hamilton and Mr. Ford are well liked by the hundreds of people with whom they come in contact, they have baffled prejudices held by some who never knew just what improved farm and home methods meant, they have encountered all sorts of obstacles in their work in the way of bad roads, yet they have remained steadfast to their posts. The next generation will appreciate their work much more than even the present.

THE DAILY SCORES ANOTHER BEAT IN GIVING THE FIRST NEWS OF FIGHT.

The Daily attempting to hang up a record for giving the news first to the Twin Cities scored what is termed in the newspaper fraternity as another "beat" last night with the returns of the Dempsey-Tunney prize fight. Several hundred people can testify to the fact that the Daily got there first, the Daily got there first with no cost to the hearers, but the advertising value of being on the ground and in behind the news will more than pay this newspaper for the expense of adding extra service and men for the "party."

Whether its sports, storms, important congressional legislation or whatever happens in the news, the Daily attempts to give it to the Albany-Decatur and surrounding public first. In home news the Daily is well represented with correspondents all over this section, correspondents using the telephones at all important events. The Daily is aided greatly in the gathering of Albany-Decatur news by the many friends of the newspaper. Special men are then sent on the job and in the afternoon newspaper the full story is given the reading public. If you want the home news or the world news you can get it in the afternoon newspaper.

THE COUNTRY STORE DESERVING OF ATTENTION.

Next week witnesses the opening of the Kiwanis Country Store, now an annual affair with the Albany-Decatur Kiwanis club. The store this year will be placed in the Echols building, Bank street, Decatur, and already promises to be a greater success than in past years.

No better hands could have given authority than those of Foster H. Pointer, local wholesaler who has been in charge of the store in past years. Mr. Pointer already has summoned his committees and will have his store ready to open long before the announced date.

The proceeds of the Country Store go each year toward the Christmas Tree fund, another monument to the ever growing good will of the local club.

The Kiwanis club will receive the same support this year as in past years for the reason that the work is recognized as one of the best moves any civic organization might make. It is difficult to estimate the amount of good your dime can do when combined with the dime of other people. You will be happy to visit the Country Store. No better use can be found for the small amount of money you will spend at the store. Get ready now to be present every afternoon and night while the store is in progress. The Kiwanians are trying to increase and advertise the good will abounding in these cities.

ADOLPH OCHS THE WIZARD WHO DREW THE NEW YORK TIMES FROM DOWNFALL.

The New York Times is now celebrating the seventy-fifth year of publication. Thirty years this great newspaper has been under the care of Adolph S. Ochs, newspaper genius, who started his career in the southland and who is a newspaper man from the ground up, rather than starting at the top and working into the lines of the business.

In a personal interview with Editor and Publisher this week Mr. Ochs said: "Millions of men could have done what I have done. I am no genius or visionary. It just happened that no mistake was made in the selection of the fundamental policy of the Times, which is to print all the news that is fit to print."

"There is too much of a tendency to set me up on a high pedestal. I fear dizziness. I have many requests to tell my story. There is no story to tell, unless it is simply that I stuck closely to one idea, concentrated on something I had learned in the hard school of experience."

"Opportunities come to every man. Ninety-nine out of a hundred men, however, are always seeking opportunities rather than preparing for them. What good is opportunity if you are not prepared for it?"

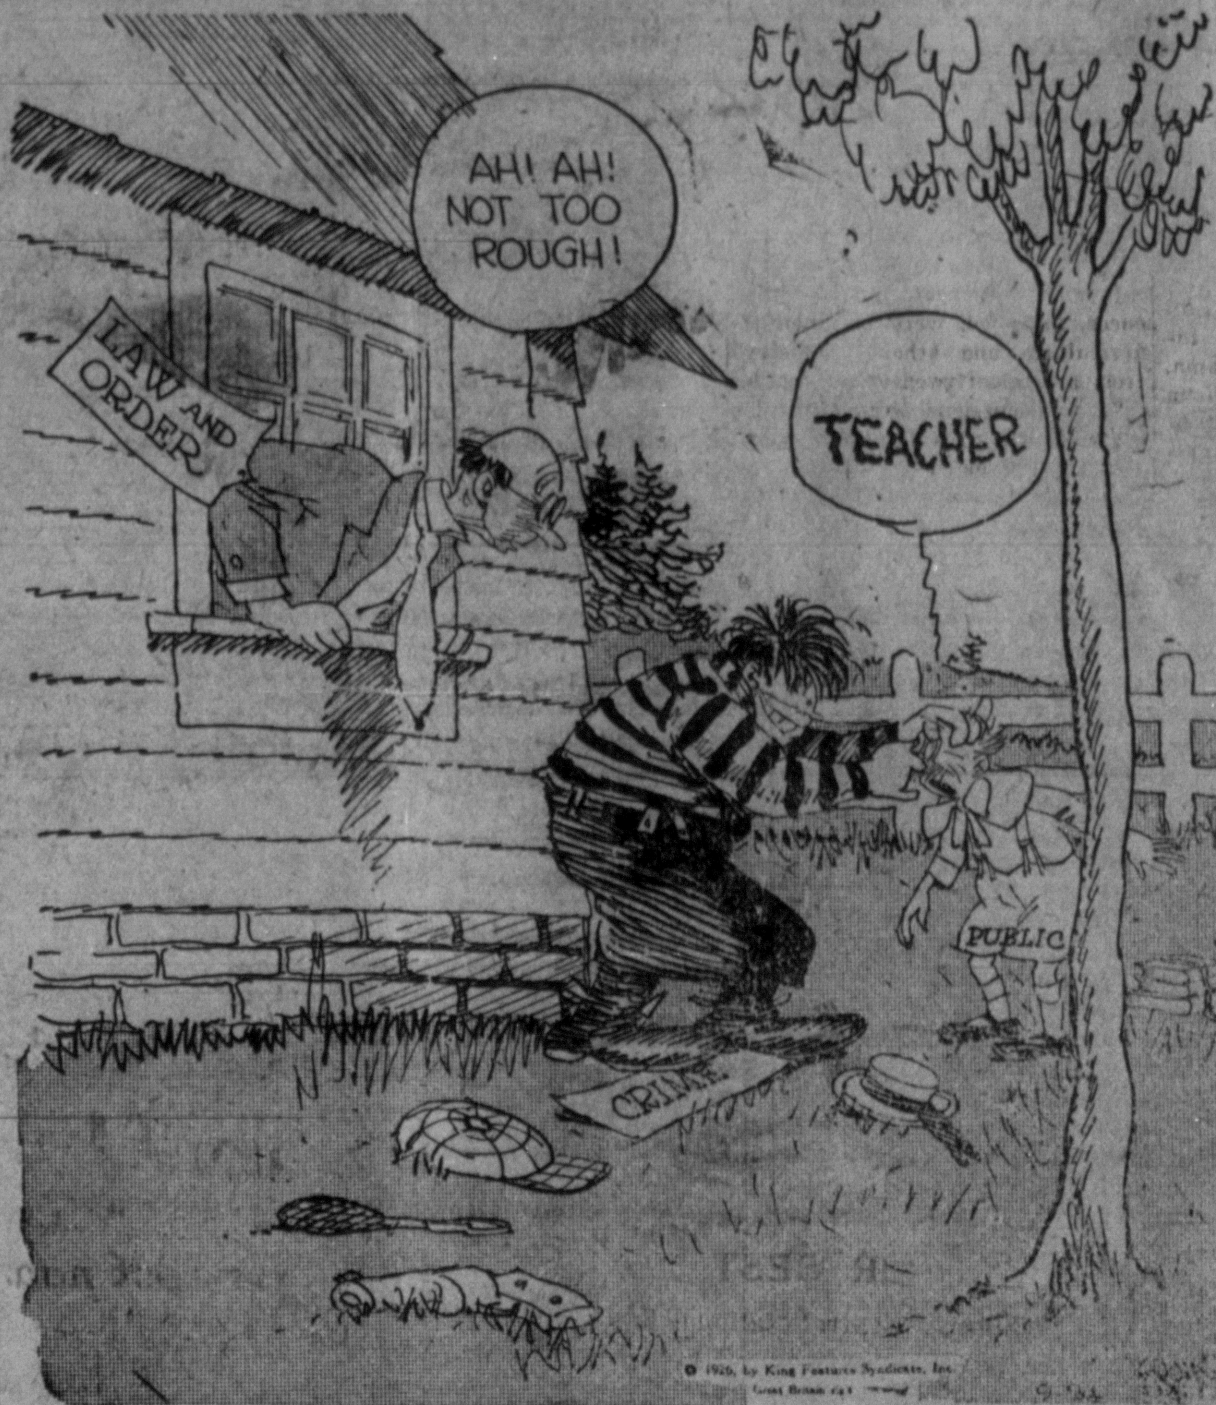

Mr. Ochs explains at length the views he holds upon the publication of a metropolitan daily and refuses to take credit for bringing the Times from its period of financial distress. The Times, however, needed the force and ability of a man like Mr. Ochs, it was a splendid newspaper to be sure, but it was without the guiding hand of the necessary genius.

Thirty years ago Mr. Ochs took the reins, today the Times is again the power in its own field and its field might well be said to contain the lands within the borders of the United States. The New York Times is recognized where the name is mentioned, it is read in the hamlet, the town, the city, because it is the New York Times and as Mr. Ochs points out he stuck to one idea and concentrated upon the building of a substantial and reputable newspaper.

The Times is the leader of the newspaper fraternity in living up to the slogan, "All the News That's Fit to Print." The Times had its difficult road, yet in coming over that road the Times has bettered itself.

Every newspaper in America will congratulate Mr. Ochs upon his victory, upon a splendid newspaper with the ideals of an American institution back of it. Every newspaper can but wish future unbounded success for so splendid a monument of achievement.

It was not so, in other days. When "the great earthquake of Lisbon" wiped out thousands of lives and destroyed a city, many lost their faith in God and in eternal justice, as others lost their lives and property.

The earthquake and dreadful fire came on a holy day, when the churches were packed with worshippers.

Roofs of churches and cathedrals fell in, crushing great numbers, even as they knelt, imploring Divine mercy.

THE day has passed when a natural disaster could be made a convincing argument for shallow Atheism. Men have lost much of their superstition, without losing their faith in eternal wisdom and justice.

We know that nature's laws work eternally and evenly, and it is for man to rely on his intelligence and science, not on protecting miracles.

WHEN the heat of the tropics causes great volumes of air to rise suddenly and other masses of air rush in, creating a tornado, life and property must be destroyed. The wisdom that rules ten millions suns in space will not suspend the laws of nature and of physics, for one tiny planet in one small solar system.

BUT there is nothing discouraging about that, nothing to diminish faith in eternal goodness. When a small child falls it cries and waits for its father to pick it up. A grown man falls, gets up, blames himself and is more careful.

Childlike ages, in calamity, waited for their heavenly father to pick them up, and doubted his goodness when the fall was very painful. The human race, grown older, wiser, has outgrown that, is proud to rely upon itself, grateful for life on a planet so marvelously safe, in a universe managed with such perfect justice.

BETTER a life of struggle and accomplishment, in a world with laws the same for all, than the slavish life of an oriental dream type, relying on some Aladdin's lamp or other device to bring what is needed.

Florida will rebuild, forget and go ahead.

GEORGE E. BRENNAN, of Chicago, running for the senate as a democrat, is laid up following a serious operation.

Because he cannot take the stump, his wife will speak for him until he leaves the hospital. A quiet, retiring woman, she knows nothing about politics, or speech making.

But voters will crowd to hear her. She may only say, "My husband is a good man, a good husband, and a good father," and with that speech make more votes than Demosthenes would get if he could come back and do his best.

IN New York Governor Al Smith's young daughter made one campaign speech in eight words. "I hope you will all vote for father." And that speech was worth more votes than the best that Governor Smith himself could deliver.

THE Right Reverend Irving P. Johnson, a bishop and editor of "The Witness," an Episcopalian periodical, says there is too much talk about whiskey, flappers, sex etc.

"All that America seems to think of or care for is sex relation. It is not particularly new. The Puritans were deeply concerned with the question. They made as many drastic laws in trying to dispose of sex as we make today trying to abolish liquor with equal success—which is no success at all.

"We should stop regarding the youth with a flask of hootch in his pocket, a flapper by his side, and a vacuum in his head, as of any importance."

Thus the bishop speaks in Mr. Bonfils' Denver Post. The vacuum in the young man's head is indeed an ancient institution. But boys and girls in high school are drinking bootleg whiskey and that is new and important, and not to be brushed aside.

BISHOP JOHNSON says "sons and daughters of laboring men are the real factors to consider." The trouble is that the laboring man's sons and daughters, able fortunately to go to high school, now that good wages are paid, also unfortunately come in contact with the bootleg whiskey. It is a disease that spreads rapidly.

LONDON FASHION GOSSIP

LONDON.—Knee breeches for women's evening wear are the latest dictates of fashion in London.

To be smart, a woman must now wear a tailored black moire dinner toilette. The skirt is short and slit at the sides to reveal the black satin court breeches, caught with small diamond buckles at either side. These breeches come below the skirt, which is attached to a bodice cut on the line of a man's evening coat, complete with tails.

This coat opens over a dress shirt of green georgette, the soft collar of which turns over on a man's dress tie.

The very opposite of this creation is a crinoline gown with a bodice of ribbed silver tissue. The left side is covered with flat velvet flowers in shades of blue, green, cyclamen, green and yellow. The bodice ties in a huge bow on the left hip, and below spread a voluminous t of spotted lavender-colored decked with frills of narrow silver lace. Underneath is a sheathlike foundation of silver lace.

Another of the new fashions is to glitter in a gown that is all gold sequins, closely massed in a variety of fancy "figures," alternating with stripes against a black background.

And if any woman wants to suggest a moonbeam, there is a model ready for her, in the shape of a silver sequined dress; or if she prefers to resemble a beautiful leaf there are any number of green sequin gowns that will carry out the idea in the most satisfactory way, and there are, too, many rainbow and flower-garden effects, for fashion, as far as evening gowns are concerned, is in a gay mood. Beads, for the moment, are on the shelf. They are not used any extent in dress decorations. On the other hand, bright printed designs are used for adorning a plain fabric. This a bright green chiffon velvet evening gown is bordered with vivid tulips that look as if the flowers were handpainted on the skirt. A huge cluster of velvet tulips rests on the right shoulder the evening cloak that accompanies it is of the same flowered velvet.

Fur fashions are interesting. Newcomers include trout kid, a silvery grey pelt with black "trout" markings.

Fox dyed marten color is another novelty, and so, too, is kolinsky fur treated to look like mink. Like mink, however, a coat of this pelt may easily run into thousands of dollars.

Fashion designers continue to draw inspiration from the jungle. A chiffon velvet brocade gown shows spots of velvet so arranged that the whole suggests a leopard skin, and it was the leopard, too, that inspired the designer of a most part, sleeveless.

IT DID ALL THAT I EXPECTED AND MORE

Said Wylam Man In Speaking of the Results He Obtained From the Use of Herb Juice.

"It did all I expected it to do and a great deal more because I was skeptical before I started taking the remedy which relieved me of constipation, indigestion, gas stomach and tired, rundown system," this was the answer given the Herb Juice man a few days ago when he asked Mr. W. A. Jaxson, a well known contracting painter who resides at 433 Forty-First Street, Wylam, Ala., if Herb Juice has helped him. This gentleman, who is the very picture of good health, now tells a remarkable story about his condition before he was fortunate enough to hear about Herb Juice. The story is as follows:

W. A. JAXSON

"I admit that I don't look or feel now like I had ever been sick, but there is a vast difference in my feeling now and before I took this wonderful remedy, Herb Juice," said Mr. Jaxson. "For a long time I have been a constant sufferer from a very stubborn case of indigestion. It seemed no matter what I ate, it just would not digest. I tried eating very light diets and very digestible foods, but I never seemed to get any relief. It all seemed to lie in my stomach and ferment, from which would form gas, which bloated me very badly and caused me intense pain through my stomach and chest. I was also very nervous, so much that it seemed that I was under a high tension all the time. I could not eat, sleep or anything else and enjoy it owing to this distressed feeling. I also was badly constipated, which added to my troubles. Liver very inactive, which caused dizzy headaches and severe pains across my back and as for that, all over my body. Of course in this condition I lost strength and felt tired out all the time. I tried many different remedies and treatments for my ailments but never was lucky enough to find anything to give me relief until at last a friend of mine recommended that I try Herb Juice, so I started using Herb Juice and now after taking several bottles I can say that it certainly did a great deal more than I ever expected it to do for me. It has completely relieved me of indigestion. I can now eat anything I want and digest it properly. I am no more gas or indigestion pains in stomach; constipation is a thing of the past, no more dizzy or sick headache, nerves are in good shape, those terrible pains across my back and joints are gone. I have a good appetite and have gained much strength and twenty pounds in weight. To make a long story short, Herb Juice has just simply reconstructed my whole system and I am now feeling dandy in every way. I am glad to make this statement in behalf of this wonderful remedy which has done so much for me. I highly recommend Herb Juice."

Real friendly advice often saves a person much trouble as in the case of Andrew T. Mosen, U. S. Government, Loc. 3, Cumberland City, Tenn. With cornet in one hand, box rattling seductively in the other, hat a little tilted, suit shabby although recognizably well cut, shoes ancient but polished to perfection, and the good old winning smile, Tony continued, week after week, to pounce upon passers-by and pester. The ritual, "Good morning. (Or good afternoon) Ex-Officers' band." Rattle rattle. "A contribution—no matter how small"—rattle-rattle—"Melody instead of grumbles,—music hath charms to soothe the savage breast and when you are generous the aching void"—rattle-rattle—"Thank you so much. So grateful." Or "Next time we meet then, on your way home from the bank. Good morning" (or afternoon, as the case might be).

The ritual, "Good morning (or good afternoon) Ex-Officers' band." Rattle, rattle

Among the men permitted by the police to occupy a safety in the middle of the street, opposite on one side to the Carlton Hotel and on the other to Brown, Shipley's office, was one V. C. who deserved it, three D. S. O.'s who ought to have had V. C.'s and four M. C.'s, only one of whom had caught it when things were showered on the staff. The Gordon Highlanders, the Irish Guards, the Rifle Brigade, the R. F. A., the R. A. F., the Machine Gunners, the Tank Corps were the regiments represented, and as Tony, with a cunning eye for snobbishness, had worked publicity in the newspapers, through Mortimer Pollock, with photographs read left to right for names, the hand had achieved very useful popularity and fame. "The Man with the Eyeglass," "The Peepers," "Town Gossip," "Your loving cousin Eric," and some of the others who pounded out their snappy nippets for the dailies had done them well, setting out their war records and family pedigrees, their nicknames and reputations. London, from his conductor to chairman, from little clerks to profiteers, knew them, therefore, as they knew the Co-Optimists, the Pollocks, the Cabinet and the Labour leaders. They had become an institution and a fact.

Tony's edging propensities, his charm of manner, his extraordinary cool looks, his keen memory for faces, his tact, but above all, his winning smile had won him the most instantly of rattle-in-chief. This meant that he did nothing more with his cursed cornet than carry it and so his lips were spared from becoming callous and he was never obliged to practise after working hours. More luck. Good old Christie. It went without saying that he enjoyed the job immensely. It was so delightfully homogeneous such a really excellent sport. Getting quickly to know the regulars, as he called the everyday passers on their way to Pall Mall clubs, and the men and women who worked in all the offices near by, he established the habit of touching these only once a week, letting them off on other days with a kind grin, a friendly greeting. The irregulars, who formed the vast majority of the people who made that sort of London an ever shifting scene, were therefore the main source of income to the band.

He was most successful, of course with women, who, as they sat at the lookers and were shocked to see their tall defenders brought to such a pass. From his old friends in the service who were not among the unemployed—there were not by any means a great number of these—he did almost equally well.

"Good God," they said invariably, when the box was rattled under their noses. "You—at this appalling game!" And gave with the same sense of horror that was Sherwood's.

"Well," he always answered, with a slight shrug, "isn't it better than drawing in chalks on the pavement like poor old Mungo Stewart, or grinding an organ in suburban roads as our old pal Foltett does? Isn't it better than going Bolsheviki like dozens of others who were with us, and are now attached to the Labour Party to talk revolution on comfort tubs? A finer! You're most frightfully kind." And when the Americans stayed in London on their way to and from the battlefields of France, the weekly average of takings looked up considerably, especially after they had read with amazement the illustrated pamphlet made up of cuttings from the newspapers and the Who's Who of the band which Tony took good care to slip into their generous hands. There was nothing like that in their cities where the officers and men of the American Expeditionary Force had all gone back to war. What was the matter with England? They were deeply moved.

Wet and fine the band played, and Tony, darting from one side of the street to the other, with the Carlton the most happy hunting ground, carried on.

He had been dragged by the proprietor of a new vacuum cleaner, the owner of an invention that would make hair grow on a billiard ball, the proprietor of a rubber suit that would reduce the weight of an Air-buckle, the head of a firm of false Jewellers that was turning out strings of pearls for miners' wives, and a well-known company promoter who, tooting the windy side of a glib genius to sell the common stock of a bogus gold mine to a poor but still glibbie public.

To all of whom Tony laughingly said "No." He preferred his silent cornet and his rattling box. He enjoyed the limelight in which he stood.

"Look! That's Tony Fortescue, brother of Lord Stirling, White Commander, married to Christine, you remember, of Christie and Co. Oh, isn't he good-looking! Isn't he perfectly priceless!"

He liked the air, the exercise, the freedom, the itinerancy, the adventure, the sport of drawing reluctant coins from the close. He delighted in his picnic lunches with Christine every day in the back alleys, the division of his hard-earned spoils every night, the reliance that was placed upon him by his friends.

To the biological uncle it was extremely plain and obvious. Every day on his way to the Ashmolean he passed Tony, contributed a regular to his box, won his confidences in short and pleasant chats. He explained his nephew's preferences for begging in these wise words:

"As I told you, just before the war, the boy's a throwback, born four hundred years beyond his time. With all the stuff in him of the old marauding Stirlings, the war found him ready, used his brilliance. His vocation was to fight and kill and outmaneuver. Now, with peace how natural for him, like his Chief, to turn forebears, to levy taxes, to maintain a rattling box and enjoy an energetic leisure. It is true that he does it with a smile and not, as they did, with the flat of the sword and the roar of the cannon. Methods apart, he is, however, faithful to type, a typical Stirling, born to be a Chief, a sort of king. His would be a happy clan if he had one, a wild, simple, hairy crowd of gipsies, enthralled by his smile and his kindness, under the spell of his humanity and daring, willing to be bled for wars and pleasures, calling him Coeur de Lion or some such heroic name. ermozize as you may, that boy is working out his destiny; is doing the thing that he must do because heredity is the only thing that counts."

VI

It was to Lady George Cornish in her own hospitable house that Tony gave yet another reason for sticking to his box-rattling job. In a dinner jacket, which Christie had had turned by a tailor who was doing a roaring trade with pre-war garments, the latest wing tie and the inevitable Ajax on his thick dark hair, he bore little physical resemblance to the deplorable ancestors of his uncle's disquisition.

Dinner, with its accustomed domestic jangles, had been most successfully surmounted. Distinctly older though he was sleek, graceful and debonair. Alcegaon, his Lanley had steered the flamboyant Kitty into smooth waters with his usual diplomatic art. And so the atmosphere was kindly in the messy little drawing room in Hill Street, Knightsbridge, when the men joined the ladies as steadily as they could.

Mortimer Pollock, who was with them, bore all the earmarks of a manufacturer of barbed wire. He was a dramatic critic at the moment, breaking plays with an elephantine foot, and the man who told the inner secrets of society and politics, without knowing them, every evening in the Flag.

Lanley had not done so badly either. Re-commissioned as a Colonel, he had occupied a fairly hygienic room in the War Office during the period of the war, and having looked very soldierly and done nothing, had collected a vast number of ribbons and much esteem. But for the Armistice, he would have become a Brigadier-General and a K.B.E. Hard luck.

The door opened and in walked Teddy Sherwood, to every one's surprise.

"How are you, Lady George? I saw these lights as I was going along and thought— But if I'm butting in . . ."

He was not the same gauche person that he had been before his service, and much of his im-jus-ta-rough-man pose, a damned grocer, had been ruffled out of him by men who had delighted in seizing on a mannerism, a self-consciousness, and worrying it to shreds. He stood hesitant in the doorway, in day clothes, stocky and bandy-legged, like a prize fighter who had managed to preserve his nose and lips, he looked considerably older, and as though he had come out of a long illness which had left other marks on his face besides the scars.

Gene Tunney Disposes of Champ In Ten Rounds, Dempsey Lacking Fight

Gene Tunney, the rough and tumble fighting ex-marine, today is the heavyweight champion of the world, having won a ten round decision over William Harrison (Jack) Dempsey, beating back his rushes, bending him to the punch and keeping him groggy in the first and ninth and tenth rounds.

Dempsey, only a shadow of his former self in tiger like fight spirit came near a knockout in the first round when the challenger drove his right solidly to the jaw. Dempsey's knees sagged as he gave ground before the attack of the challenger.

Tearing into the marine, Dempsey fought hard, but after three years of ring inactivity and with three years of age crowding against him, he was unable to develop the attack of the Dempsey at Toledo, the Dempsey against Firpo. He was not the fighting machine he had been and the 132,000 people who paid near $2,000,000 to see the battle were disappointed. They saw a great champion suffer the reversal of form that comes in fighting and all other lines where inactivity takes its toll.

Tunney literally tore the crown from the head of the champion. He didn't win his title in the spectacular manner in which sportmen hoped, but with dogged determination characteristic of the marine force at Belleau Wood and at thousands of other fields scattered over the globe.

Crowd Fifty-Fifty

The hundreds of people gathered in the front of the Daily office last night could not be called non-partisan, fight crowds never are but the Dempsey and Tunney percentage seemed to be about even. A blow from either of the men crashing home on the anatomy of his opponent brought forth a roar from the crowd. Second avenue was choked with people, unusually quiet as the announcer in the window of the Daily office told off the news blow-by-blow and round by round.

Jamming into the offices of the newspaper the crowd was equally as boisterous as the crowd on the outside. After each blow the crowd on the inside exchanged views on the outcome of the fight, while the crowd on the outside barely mentioned the outcome as the fight progressed.

Even as far as the seventh round the folks on the inside of the office, Dempsey partisans, expected to hear the fatal toll of ten start over the prostrate form of the challenger. Then in the tenth their hopes were revived as the champion came out of his corner with a rush, their hope died there however as Tunney met the champion with an attack equal in ferocity and with better effect. Dempsey was swinging hard, but he was swinging wild with one eye closed and the other badly cut and bleeding.

Imported Announcer

The crowd wondered at the strong voice issuing from the small frame of the Daily announcer for the evening, Mr. Dyer, who has successfully conducted the blows to the body at close quarters. Dempsey missed a wild right swing and they clinched. Dempsey was short with a right to the body and Tunney drove a right to the body. Tunney landed two light lefts to the head. Dempsey missed a right to the head and caught two lefts on the jaw. Tunney landed a right to the jaw.

ROUND TEN

They shook hands. They exchanged punches to the body and clinched in the center of the ring. Dempsey missed a right to the head. Dempsey drove two rights and lefts to the body and Tunney backed away. Dempsey pursued the challenger, pinning him with body blows and forcing him into a corner.

Tunney landed two lefts and a right to the chin, staggering Dempsey. Tunney hooked a right to the chin and they clinched. Dempsey's left eye was closed. Tunney drove two rights to the head. Tunney staggered Dempsey with a right to the head, backing Dempsey to the ropes. Dempsey was groggy as the round ended. Tunney drove a right and left to the jaw as Dempsey, blinded, stepped in.

Baby Show for the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the North Alabama Fair, took over the job of announcing and right well did he perform. His job was made more difficult with the crowd jamming its way up against the leased wire operator who was getting the full story of the fight in dots and dashes. Dyer kept the crowd in a rollicking mood with his interpretation of those same dots and dashes, giving his version of the fight along with the telegraphic facts which poured in from the ringside. Dyer refused the use of a megaphone, explaining that he had done the job before, in fact about the fondest thing he ever did. His job was one of the most difficult to perform, but he handled his role well, vying with the best leather-lunged solon who ever dented a chair in the Senate.
